Red: The colour of life. Red is said to increase the pulse rate and is used to support the circulatory system and combat anemia, asthma, skin diseases, and chronic coughs.

Orange: Symbolizes the rising sun and is used to treat depression, pessimism, arteriosclerosis, loss of appetite, and to calm the digestive system.

Yellow: The brightest of all colours, yellow is used to fight glandular and lymphatic diseases and strengthen the nervous system.

Green: The middle chakra, green has a stabilizing effect and is the colour of concentration. Green is used to treat bronchitis, inflammation of the joints, eye diseases, and diabetes.

Blue: The colour of peace and infinity, blue is said to relieve headaches, migraines and stomach and muscle cramps and to positively affect all pain.

Indigo: A cool colour with a sedative effect, indigo is used to treat eye, ear, and nose problems, as well as mental issues and addiction.

Violet: A meditative colour that is used to calm and relax muscles, organs, and the nervous system, and is particularly useful for problems with the lymphatic system and spleen.
